Quillon Harbor Advisors LLC

www.quillonharbor.com

July 26, 2022

Sandra Waters
Chief Financial Officer
Beck, Martin and Dawson

Dear Sandra:

Thank you for the long afternoon you and the shareholders spent with Richard Mccoy and me this month, and for being so plain with us about what the company wants new capital to do and what it is unwilling to give up in order to get it. This letter sets out the terms on which Quillon Harbor Advisors will act as financial advisor to Beck, Martin and Dawson in raising growth capital, and we have put the commercial terms first so that you and the shareholders can settle them before turning to the work itself.

Fee and Start of the Engagement

Our fee for this engagement is $71,500. It covers the whole of the work this letter describes, from our first review of the company's figures through to the closing of a financing, and it will not increase if the raise asks more of our time than any of us now expects.

The engagement will begin on August 5, 2022, and we expect it to run for about five months from that day, which is the time a well-prepared raise usually needs to travel from first materials to signed documents. Should the calendar move for reasons on either side, we will tell you as soon as we see it coming, and the fee will stay where it is.

How We Will Approach the Raise

We will begin with the company and come to the market only once we understand it as an investor will. Justin Gonzalez, an Analyst in our Advisory group, will build the financial model alongside your team and set the company beside comparable growth financings, so that before any investor hears from us, you and the shareholders will have our considered view of the valuation the market is likely to support and of the terms that usually travel with it.

From that work we will prepare a short summary that describes the business by its sector and size without naming it, and a fuller confidential presentation for investors who have signed a confidentiality agreement. Kelly Brown, also an Analyst with us, will assemble a list of 80 prospective investors drawn from growth equity funds, family offices and other minority investors whose mandates suit a company of this kind, and you will approve that list name by name before a single call is placed.

Once outreach begins, Kelly will keep a written log of every contact and every reply, and we will report to you on it each week, so that you always know who has been approached and what each of them has said. Richard Mccoy, a Partner of the firm, will lead the engagement, make the introductions himself, and sit with you and the shareholders through every investor meeting and every discussion of terms.

Investors who wish to go further will meet management and then be given access to a data room that we will organize with your team. We will then gather their term sheets, set them side by side for you with our written view of each, and work with you and the company's counsel through the negotiation of the definitive documents and on to closing.

I will read every document before it leaves our office, and I will be available whenever a decision would benefit from a second voice on our side. In return we will ask a good deal of your team, chiefly timely access to the monthly results and to management, and we will keep our requests organized and as few as the work allows.

Invoicing and Expenses

Our invoices will be addressed to you, and each is payable on receipt. The company will also reimburse our reasonable out-of-pocket expenses, which in a raise of this kind are chiefly travel to investor meetings, and we will ask your approval before incurring any single expense that falls outside the ordinary course.

Ending the Engagement

This engagement continues until a financing closes or until either of us ends it by written notice to the other, which either of us may give at any time and for any reason. If the company ends the engagement and then, within the following year, completes a financing with an investor we introduced, the fee will remain payable, since that investor will have come to the company through our work.

Confidentiality

We will hold in confidence everything the company shares with us and will use it for this engagement alone. Nothing that leaves our office before an investor has signed a confidentiality agreement in a form you have approved will name the company, and the confidential presentation will go only to investors who have signed one. Neither of us will announce a financing, or describe our part in it publicly, without the other's consent.

Our Role

We act for the company alone in this matter, and we will accept no fee or other payment from any investor in connection with it. If we come to learn of a relationship between the firm and an investor on the list that you would want to know about, we will tell you before that investor is approached, and you may strike it from the list without any discussion.

Limitation of Liability

We will rely on the information the company and its advisers provide without verifying it independently, and we do not give legal, tax or accounting advice, for which the company should look to its own counsel and accountants. We will bring care and our best judgment to the work, but we cannot promise that any investor will commit or that a financing will close on particular terms, and our liability to the company arising from this engagement will not exceed the fees paid to us under this letter.

Governing Law

This letter is governed by the law of the state in which our principal office is located, and the courts of that state will hear any dispute that arises under it. It is the whole of our agreement on these matters and may be changed only by a writing that both of us sign.

If these terms match your understanding, please sign below on behalf of Beck, Martin and Dawson and return a copy to me. When it arrives, Richard Mccoy will telephone you to arrange the first working session, where Justin Gonzalez and Kelly Brown will take your team through the information we will need in order to begin.

_____

Heather Delacruz
Managing Partner
Date: July 26, 2022

_____

Sandra Waters
Chief Financial Officer, Beck, Martin and Dawson
Date: July 26, 2022