STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL

Heather Miller
Chief Operating Officer
Hamilton PLC

Dear Heather,

As we agreed when we last spoke, I am writing to set out the terms on which Quillon Harbor Advisors LLC will act for the board of directors of Hamilton PLC in connection with the proposed sale of one of the company's operating divisions. I have tried to make the letter as plain about the limits of our work as about its content, because an opinion is only as useful as the board's understanding of what it does and does not say.

The board has asked us for our opinion as to whether the consideration to be received by the company in the sale is fair, from a financial point of view, to the company. To reach it we will review the division's historical results and management's forecast, work with you and the division's finance team to establish what the business would cost to run on its own once it leaves the group, and test the proposed consideration against a discounted cash flow analysis, the trading values of comparable listed companies, and the prices paid in comparable transactions. We will also read each draft of the sale agreement as it is produced, since the opinion must speak to the consideration as the final agreement defines it.

We should say just as clearly what the opinion will not do. It will not be a recommendation to the board on whether to proceed, or to shareholders on how to act, and it will not weigh the sale against other courses the company might take; nor will we negotiate with the buyer or look for other buyers, since either would compromise the independence that gives an opinion its value. We cannot tell you today what our conclusion will be, and nothing in this letter, or in our work along the way, should be read as a promise of one.

Richard Mccoy, a Partner of the firm, will lead the work from day to day and will be your first call on any question of substance. Sandra Norman, an Advisory Associate, will run the information request and keep the record of what has been asked for, what has arrived, and what is still outstanding, while Melissa Jacobson, an Analyst, will build the valuation analyses under Richard's direction. I will remain responsible for the engagement as a whole, I will read the opinion before it goes to our internal opinion committee, and I will attend the board meeting at which it is delivered.

The engagement commences on August 13, 2021. The table that follows lists what the board will receive from us, and roughly when; the later stages are paced by the board's own timetable for the sale and by the negotiation with the buyer, and if either moves we will write to you promptly to say how our schedule moves with it.

Deliverable	What it contains	Timing
Information request	A written list of the documents and data we need, sent to you and tracked to completion by Sandra Norman	The first days of the engagement
Management sessions	Working sessions with you and the division's finance team on the historical results, the forecast, and the services the division draws from the group today	The first weeks of the engagement
Note on the basis of valuation	A short paper setting out the forecast and the stand-alone cost base we propose to rely on, for the board's confirmation before any valuation work is presented	When the management sessions are complete
Preliminary review with the board	Our preliminary analyses, presented without a conclusion on fairness, so that the board sees the method before it sees the answer	Before the sale agreement reaches agreed form
Opinion committee review	Review of our analyses and draft opinion by senior members of the firm who take no part in the engagement	When the sale agreement is in substantially final form
Fairness opinion and presentation	Our written opinion, addressed to the board, with a presentation of the analyses that support it	At the board meeting called to approve the sale
Bring-down letter, if needed	Confirmation of the opinion, or notice that we cannot confirm it, if the terms change or signing is delayed after delivery	At the board's request, before signing

Our fee, and when it is paid

Our fee for this engagement is $74,000, payable in two parts: the first on signature of this letter and the balance on delivery of the opinion. The fee is fixed and falls due whatever the opinion concludes and whether or not the sale proceeds, so that nothing we are paid depends on the answer we give. We will also bill reasonable out-of-pocket expenses at cost, monthly, and will ask you before incurring any beyond travel and document costs.

How long this letter runs

This letter takes effect when you countersign it and runs until we have delivered the opinion and any bring-down the board asks for, or until the sale is abandoned, whichever comes first. Either of us may end it earlier by written notice; if the board does so, the first part of the fee and any expenses already incurred remain payable, and we may withdraw if we cannot obtain the information an opinion requires.

Use of the opinion

The opinion will be addressed to the board and given solely for its use in considering the sale. It may not be quoted, summarized, or disclosed to anyone else without our prior written consent, except where the law requires it, and in that case we ask to review the description of the opinion before it is published.

Confidentiality

We will hold everything the company gives us in confidence and use it only for this engagement. Wherever our working papers might circulate beyond the team named above, they will describe the division by sector and size rather than by name, and we will not discuss the sale with the buyer or its advisers except as the board directs.

Reliance and the limit of our liability

We will rely on the information the company and its advisers provide without verifying it independently, and we will not appraise individual assets or give legal, tax, or accounting advice. Our liability to the company in connection with this engagement is limited to the fees we have received under this letter, except for losses finally found by a court to have resulted from our gross negligence or willful misconduct, and the company will indemnify us against claims by third parties arising from the engagement on the same terms.

Independence

We will accept no engagement from the buyer while this one continues. Before we deliver the opinion, we will confirm to the board in writing any relationship with the buyer that the board should weigh in reading it.

Governing law

This letter is governed by the laws of the state in which our principal office is located, and the courts of that state will hear any dispute between us that we cannot settle by discussion.

Once the board is content with these terms, I would ask you to countersign this letter on its behalf and return a copy to me. The day it reaches us, Sandra Norman will send you our information request, and Richard Mccoy will call you to fix the first session with the division's finance team.
